History and Culture

From distant shores, the legacies of two influential families one of royal birth and the other of prominence and wealth were destined to unfold on the shores of Kauai. The Kamehameha royal family enjoyed their visits to the north shore of Kauai. In 1860, it was during one of their sojourns with their cherished son, Albert that the area was renamed, "the barony de Princeville", the city of the prince.

The internationally acclaimed St. Regis New York is the original landmark hotel built by John Jacob Astor in 1904. The Astors defined the height of "American aristocracy" during the Gilded Age in the 18th and 19th century. The family built a legacy of premiere hotels and legendary service.

The St. Regis Princeville Resort resides in Princeville at Hanalei. It is located in the moku (land division) of Halele'a (the joyful house). Halele'a was noted in ancient times as the most beautiful place in the Hawaiian Islands. This area and its immediate surroundings were kula lands, available to the maka'ainana or common person for cultivation and fishing.
